Valorant is one of the more popular shooters of our time, and Riot Games certainly has a knack for making popular, well-received titles. The competitiveness of those games is most notable, so any edge you have over your opponent can have tremendous impact. Whilst it may seem more of a placebo thing than anything, some people perform better when their crosshairs are a certain color. Valorant's options are quite limited in that regard, hence ValorantCC is a viable tool to use to personalize your crosshair which might just give you a slight edge in your gameplay. Do it your way This tool here tackles the aforementioned insufficiency by allowing users to customize their crosshair's color to their heart's content. Users can modify the hues of each crosshair type. The primary crosshair's color and its outline can be readily changed, and the same can be said about altering the aim down and sniper dot

It is not a cheat and I am not affiliated to Riot Games. Related Searches Trinket: Gaming Searches: Most people know to use the Settings menu in any application to modify aspects of the program. While this is true, some apps offer more options than others. Both Microsoft Office and Google Chrome offer more settings than what is presented in the menu. Sadly, this is not the case with ValorantCC, and there is only limited control and customization available. Menus When players click on the Settings menu option, they're presented with a menu that contains the following entries: Color / Size / Size / Auto Size / Scale. Color When it comes to crosshair colors, it's important to note that they aren't clickable. While having a customizable crosshair is an excellent feature, the lack of clickability means that users can't accidentally select it or mistype. As mentioned earlier, the color picker is present to allow users to pick the color they want. These colors are available in the following palettes: Valorant, League, Patch, or Random. Users can further limit the number of colors available by picking "Random colors." Users can use the color picker to select just the color they want, or use the color picker to see a preview of how the crosshair will look on a variety of materials. Size When it comes to crosshair size, the options are similarly limited. A variety of sizes, as well as how to adjust the size and auto-size them, are available. Auto Size Just like with the size of your crosshair, the auto-size function will allow you to easily adjust the size of

A: With ValorantCC you can change the sniper's dot size, colour, outline and change the aim down when in headup mode. You can see these options here: This can be done in game during a match or in ValorantCC itself. You can have an example of how it looks on screen here: Q: Hedge Funds: S&P 500 is out of favor right now, but where to put money? Hi, I am not a market insider, but I can follow the news, and I read that the S&P500 (S&P/TSX Composite Index) dropped again today (at least in the U.S.). Yesterday, there were comments that it could hit the 200 level (200-25 in Feb). I just wanted to know if you have some idea to which stock or sector to put money to out of the misery of the market right now? Thank you very much for your insights. A: This is a better question than a stock, so I'm going to redirect you to the discussion here, which has already been answered in depth. The short answer is that you should buy when it is still cheaper than owning the index, and sell when it is still higher than the index. Equity ETFs are one option. The advice is good, but is has worked badly for individual investors. In particular: It's hard to buy individual stocks when the market is doing well. You are a one-off. It's even harder to sell individual stocks after they perform well. You now need to persuade investors that the stock isn't a one-off.
